

APPLE CROP IN COUNTY LARGER; PRICES HIGHER

Many Shipments Abroad Despite High Foreign Tariffs.

CANNING PLANTS BEGIN OPERATION

Adams county's commercial apple crop, reported larger than last year and selling at prices above the 1931 quotations, is now being harvested. Jonathan and Grimes Golden apples, two of the lesser commercial varieties, have already been harvested, and the leading commercial crops of York Imperials and Stayman Winesaps are now being picked.

Despite high tariffs against American products in European countries, an unusually large quantity of Adams county apples is being shipped abroad this fall. Germany, Sweden and England have been buying Adams county apples in large lots.

Foreign Sales Large

One Adams county shipper said that of 40 carloads of Jonathan apples shipped out this fall, 35 carloads went to foreign countries. Some countries have a 10 per cent tariff on American apples and are threatening to impose a tariff equivalent to $125 a barrel, but despite these imports foreign dealers are clamoring for Adams county fruit and are willing to pay the price.

York Imperial is one variety eagerly sought after abroad, and it is expected that much of this year's crop in this county will go to European markets. York Imperials are bringing from $2 to $2.25 a barrel, while the Staymans are about 50 cents a barrel higher.

Labor Is Plentiful

Orchardists report an abundance of labor for the apple-picking season. Pickers are being paid at the rate of two and one-half cents a bushel, the equivalent of from $150 to $2 a day.

With the commercial apple season in full swing, the C. H. Musselman company canneries at Biglerville and Gardners began work today. The Knouse and Pohl canning company, Peach Glen, will begin operations next Monday. All three plants are expected to work full time for at least two months.

More than 100 women and about 50 men are being employed at each of the Musselman factories. About 110 women and 50 men will be employed at the Knouse and Pohl plant. The Knouse and Pohl plant also will begin the manufacture of vinegar next Monday.

And sure enough, Donald walked away with all the honors of the contest, winning first prize under the critical examination of a dozen prominent Baltimore county physicians. He was pronounced One Hundred Per Cent Perfect in every respect.

Occupant Of Light Sedan

Mrs. Miller and her mother were occupants of a light sedan, owned by Nevin E. Rider, New Oxford, and driven by Joseph L. Pritchard, of Richmond, collided at the intersection of the Lincoln highway and the Hunterstown road at the Coleman farm, five miles east of here.

Pritchard, according to the motor patrol version of the crash, pulled to the right side of the highway and signalled for a left-hand turn. TEAMS READY
FOR OPENING

In Spite Of Early Rain Ball Park Officials Prepare For Contest.

Yankee Stadium, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—A light rain, aftermath of a night of downpour, sent workmen scurrying frantically shortly before 11 a. m. today to cover the surface of the playing field, and preserve it if possible for the opening game of the world series between the Yanks and the Chicago Cubs.

Sullen rain clouds hung low and a dark mist flooded the big American league ball park, but from all sides came assurances that only a steady, drenching downpour could prevent the start of the annual battle for the world's baseball championship. The Yankee club house, flooded with calls and questions, assured everyone that the game would be played. Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis was equally insistent that hostilities begin today unless weather conditions become impossible.

Promptly at 11 a. m. the gates for $1.10 rush seats were opened, and 12,000 of the faithful who had braved a stormy night and early morning, rushed into the right field bleachers, known locally as "Ruthville" because of the number of balls the great Babe deposits there.

TRIAL OF NEGRO
IN MURDER CASE
MAY END TODAY

Prosecution Tries To Prove Defendant Planned To Shift Blame.

Towson, Md., Sept. 28 (AP).—Nearing the closing of its case against Ewell Lee, 60-year-old negro farm hand, the prosecution today bent its efforts toward proving that the defendant planned to put the blame for the murder of Glenn K. Davis and this amily to another farm hand, and was preparing to flee from the eastern shore of Maryland when arrested.

James Fasset, negro, testified today in the Baltimore county court, where Lee is on trial for the second time for murder of Davis, that Lee approached him on the day the backed bodies of Lee's employer and his wife and two daughters were discovered in their isolated farm house, near Taylorville, and offered to turn his employment on the Davis farm over to Fasset.

Fasset said Lee told him he was preparing to make a trip to Baltimore to purchase hunting equipment.

The state has contended that Lee made plans to leave Ocean City the day after the bodies were found, but was prevented because he was arrested.

An escort was furnished today for Martha Miller, aged negroess, who conducts a boarding house at Ocean City, whose testimony last night was an important link in the state's contention that Lee is guilty of the murder. She was abused last night as she was leaving the court house, two negroes cursing her.

COURT ACQUITS
FRANKLIN MAN

Howard Leonard Freed Of Extortion Charges Against Former Employer.

Howard Leonard, 49, of near Mount Union, Franklin county, father of five children, was acquitted of a charge of extortion in court at Chambersburg. He was accused of leaving a threatening note at the cottage of his former employer, Mrs. R. C. Miller, of Gettysburg, operator of the Caledonia golf course, on the morning of last May 21.

The jury of ten men and two women returned the acquittal verdict after C. C. Hart, of Williamsport, a handwriting expert, had declared the handwriting in the note to be the same as that in specimens allegedly prepared by Leonard for state police at the officers' direction.

Hart testified that there had been some attempt of the threatening note writer to disguise his handwriting. He also called attention to three words misspelled both in the note left for Mrs. Miller and the Leonard specimens. The words were "gulf" for golf; "corse" for course, and "wether" for weather.

Under cross-examination Leonard was asked by the district attorney to spell golf course. "G-u-l-f c-o-u-r-s-e," he replied.

Leonard denied the allegation of the indictment, stating that he did not write and leave the note found by the inn keeper.

The message, poorly composed, was signed "K. K. K." and warned Mrs. Miller that unless Leonard received $10 from her, had his job restored at the golf course and she discharged another employe the sheds on the golf course and her cottage would be burned.

Drivers Must
Check Weights

James C. Cole, Adams county sealer of weights and measures, today sounded a warning to truckers, bringing coal direct from the mines to Adams county to give full weight or prosecutions will follow.

According to Mr. Cole, two glaring instances of short weight were brought to his attention, Tuesday, with the result that he called into conference Oscar B. Baker, assistant director of the state bureau of standards, to determine what action should be taken against short weight truckers.

At one place in Adams county, Mr. Cole said he found a 3 1/2-ton load of coal 600 pounds short, while at another place a 10,400-pound load was 2,250 pounds short.

With practically all vessels having run from the center of the storm and communications cut off from land stations over which the storm passed, the weather bureau was having difficulty in tracing its path.

Bullet Squad Rounding Into Shape For Juniata Game

In lining up two teams for polishing off treatment Tuesday night, Coaches Bream and Frank gave to followers of the Bullets in their first intimation of the line-up for the season's opening game with Juniata college on Memorial field, Saturday at 2:30 p. m. While the line was comprised of many veteran favorites, the backfield was radically changed in personnel.

On the basis of their fine play in Saturday's scrimmage two sophomore backs, Dunbar, former Crafton high school ace, and Dan McGinnis, a Franklin and Marshall academy flash, were given the half-back assignments. The veteran Ebby, Harrisburg boy, and Russ Gilbert, a Gettysburg lad, rounded out the first backfield. An alternating quartet was composed of Al Jones at quarter; Larry Morris and Ed Norwirl, a sophomore find from Easthampton, Long Island, at the halves, and Mulligan at full. Olke-wicz, McMillan and Howard were also inserted into the line-up at times.

Colleges Must Inspire Students
"To Be Different," Says Hanson

Gettysburg President Explains
Educational Ideals
In Interview.

THE greatest objective of the modern educator should be to help a young man develop individuality, Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg college, and former head of the Pennsylvania Association of College Presidents, told C. William Duncan in an interview for the latter's column on the editorial page of a Philadelphia evening newspaper.

"Helping a boy find himself and develop his own individuality is one of the prime purposes of college life today," said Doctor Hanson.

"One of my principal slogans to the boys is, 'Dare to be different.' of leaders to concentrate on mass production.

"We are going to see great changes in Russia during the next few years," he opined.

"Russia is going to find out that you can't make millions of people walk alike, talk alike, dress alike and think alike without crushing the very elements that are fundamental in all progress. The cultivation of individual aptitude and ability is just as essential as the building up of team cooperation."

In publishing the interview, Mr. Duncan says: "I always listen with interest to the opinions of Doctor Hanson, whom I would describe as a gentleman of courtesy and vision. He 'The world is full of echoes. There are too few real voices."

Russia Forgets Individual Doctor Hanson points to Russia as the spot where individuality has been forgotten in the attempt looks into the future and I have found, over a span of years, often sees what is coming.

Compares Mussolini With Stalin "An idealist in many ways, he combines with that idealism a vast amount of travel and practical experience. He once lived in Europe for two years and, since then, has made four extended trips over there and one of brief duration. He has traveled through every principal country in Europe, western Asia and northern Africa.

"What do you think of Mussolini and his work in Italy?" Mr. Duncan asked.

In answering, he briefly compared the work of Il Duce with that of Stalin.

"Stalin is trying to level down all Russia to one class," he said. "The nobility has been exiled or killed. The intelligentsia has been exiled or given very subordinate places. The same thing applies to the clerical or spiritual leaders of the country. The purpose of Stalin is to produce a socialized state that is completely mechanized."

Italy "Sticks Together" "Mussolini has an idea that is just as clear cut. He has just as much determination as Stalin, but he has made the development of Italy his supreme objective. Mussolini has recognized differences in individuals. He has recognized the value to society of all its component parts. His one insistence is that his people shall pull together.

"Mussolini has stood between Italy and total economic collapse and I say this after going up and down Italy four times during the last five years."

"Then you are an admirer of Mussolini?"

"Yes—but only for Italy." Mr. Duncan's next question pertained to the trend of modern education. Doctor Hanson answered by saying that educators are trying more and more to inspire young men with desire to make contributions to life rather than to obtain just personal advantages for themselves.

Magazine Lauds Record "Instead of organizing to produce we are organizing to live and there is a vast difference between the two," he commented.

Mr. Duncan wanted his opinion on the effect of the depression on

The first string line was composed of Bill Cowell, a Philadelphia boy, at center; Captain Stoner and Murgard, veterans, at the guard posts; Rodman Smith, who returned to the squad after a year's absence, and Herb Ewing, husky Red Bank, New Jersey, boy, at the tackles, and Eden, completely recovered from an old injury, and McCarty, a three-year veterans, at ends.

Replacements were made from the following group: centers, Bogar, Timmins, Hallman; guards, Cronlund, Moody, Nye, Mumford; tackles, Azar, Messinger, Maust; ends, Kozma, Hall, Eckert, McMillan.

Determined to avenge last year's defeat, Bullet coaches and players will labor the rest of the week to produce a smooth-working machine which can stop the flashy Lino Petty, diminutive Juniata quarterback, and supporting cast, and score the necessary points for a Bullet victory.

colleges. He has weathered the storm nicely at Gettysburg, according to the Business and Commerce, a business magazine, which recently said:

"The work which has been done by Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg college, in counteracting the depression is typical of the highest ideals of American education as this foremost executive has distinguished his administration by exhibiting a brand of business foresight that might well be emulated by the business men of the country. How well Doctor Hanson has succeeded in defending Gettysburg from the depression is shown by the splendid financial condition of the institution at this time, and the continued excellence of his standing in the educational world."

Depression Affects Attendance "What has been the effect of the depression on the attendance at colleges in central Pennsylvania?" Doctor Hanson was asked. "Have many boys been forced to drop out because of the dent in the bank accounts of their parents, or is the attendance holding up?"

"Everyone knows that many boys have been forced out because of financial conditions," answered Doctor Hanson. "But there are still many colleges which are able to keep up their enrollments. You know, for a time, there were more applicants than colleges could take care of. Now every applicant gets consideration. I couldn't name specific institutions in answer to your question about central Pennsylvania schools because I have not yet heard the reports on attendance. We have as many students as we had last year; that is, about five hundred and fifty. All in all the falling off in attendance at colleges has been less than I anticipated."

Has Faith In Future "What about the college man who is graduating. Isn't he rather discouraged at spending four years in college and then, in many instances, becoming a member of the 'army of the unemployed'?"

"Not if he realizes that this is a temporary condition and that men have gone out of college in other bad years and made successes out of themselves."

"Do you think the United States is going to come out of this situation without bad and permanent scars?"

"The man who thinks of America's future in terms of crepe is a blind man. In the future America is going to be, more and more, the world leader. We have had hard times before and have lived through them. We shall survive these hard times, as we survived those of the past."

EX-MAYOR SAYS
DAVIS TOLD HIM
OF ENDING WORK

Former Baltimore Official
Testifies At Hearing
Of Senator.

New York City, N. Y., Sept. 28 (AP).—Former Mayor William S. Broening, of Baltimore, today called Senator James J. Davis, who is on trial charged with lottery law violation, as having once said he "couldn't be a party" to any plan to raise money through prize schemes.

Broening, a former supreme dictator of the Loyal Order of Moose, was the first witness today in Davis' trial for participation in alleged lotteries said by the government to have been conducted by the Moose in connection with the organization's 1930-31 charity balls. Davis is director general of the Moose.

"Did you ever discuss the charity balls with Mr. Davis?" Broening was asked by Charles H. Tuttle, of defense counsel. "I never did," Broening replied, and in answer to another question added he had heard Davis express his opinion "on such things."

"It was at the International Fraternal convention at Cardiff, Wales," he said. "A proposition was submitted by a member who said he could fix up a plan to raise money that involved prizes. He said if the order would approve it, and Jim Davis would get behind it, he could put it over. I was with him when he spoke to Davis."

"Jim Davis just smiled and said, 'No, I couldn't be a party to anything like that and the order couldn't be a party to it.'"

New York, Sept. 28 (AP).—Former Mayor William F. Broening, of Baltimore, stepped briskly to the witness stand in the Davis federal court lottery trial Tuesday and related how Senator James J. Davis (Republican, Pennsylvania), told him how he relinquished his contract as organizer for the Loyal Order of Moose.

"Bill, old boy," Mr. Broening said Senator Davis told him, "the work is too much for me."

Mr. Broening, who has been a member of the Moose since 1910, was hailed by the defense as important proof of their contention that the senator, indicted as a leader in alleged gigantic fraternal lotteries, had given up active work in the Moose order before the lotteries were held.

Says Talk Took Place At Sharon The former mayor said that at a council meeting of the Moose in Sharon, Senator Davis announced he was going to give up his work in the Moose organization department because of his many duties and was turning it over to Fred W. Jones and Joseph Jenkins.

"Did he say work or contract?" interposed Judge Frank Coleman.

"It was contract," said the former mayor promptly. It has been shown Senator Davis, who the government contends was himself the "organization department," had a contract with the Moose to organize new lodges and get initiation fees for his pay.

Narrates Connection With Order Mr. Broening, questioned by Charles H. Tuttle, of defense counsel, said he joined the Moose in 1910 and had been a member of the supreme council, supreme dictator and grand alumnus of the alumni association, as well as other positions.

"Do you remember the convention in Atlantic City in 1931?" asked Tuttle.

"I do."

"Did you have occasion to make a report for the supreme council of that convention?"

"I made that report."

He said the report was a typewritten statement.

A copy was handed to him to read. He identified the signatures of himself and other members of the council on the back and said that it was a true copy of the report that he read.

BASEBALL RIOT IS EXPLAINED

Manager Carl Kane, of the Arendtsville baseball team, today explained in detail the cause of the disturbance during the Arendtsville-Rouzeville baseball game, at Arendtsville, last Saturday afternoon.

Manager Kane said that Pitcher Wierman took exception to the decision of Umpire Smith, of Rouzeville, in calling a runner safe at first on a close play. Wierman complained to the umpire that the runner was out whereas Smith ruled the runner safe.

During the argument between Wierman and Smith, Manager Kane said that Smith called Wierman an abusive name, as Wierman was leaving the scene of the argument. Wierman then turned and slapped Umpire Smith's face. Kane said that Wierman did not hit Smith in the jaw and knock him down.

Manager Kane also declared that the argument was intensified when a Rouzeville player, the first on the field, struck an Arendtsville man on the back with a baseball bat.

Nothing Venture

by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Jervis Weare's already teeming world reels again under the knowledge that it was Nan, the girl he married to save his fortune after Rosamund Carew's treachery, who had ten years before saved his life. Nan has left the room angrily after she and Ferdinand Francis fail to convince Jervis that Rosamund's cousin, Robert Leonard, is behind the series of murderous "accidents" that have threatened Jervis of late.

Chapter 33

TENDER THOUGHTS

Jervis went striding down the drive and, once outside the gates, turned into a field. He could have found his way blindfolded, but out here under the sky and away from shadowy trees, it was not so dark. The cloudless expanse above his head was luminous and already pricked with stars. The moon had not yet risen.

As he walked, his thoughts cleared. It was Nan who had saved his life ten years ago at the risk of her own, and if she had known this, their whole relation was on a different basis; it was profoundly affected—so profoundly, in fact, as to alter his entire point of view.

He went back to the stinging shock of Rosamund's defection on the eve of their marriage. He had believed then, and had since had this belief intensified, that it was a shameless and callous manoeuvre to supplant him as his grandfather's heir.

To counter this, he must be married by the date fixed in Ambrose Weare's will. Nan had stepped into the breach with her quiet proposal that they should marry as a matter of business. She had been very businesslike. She must have something for her trouble—a percentage. She had, in fact, put herself up for sale for ten thousand dollars. He had not known then that the money was for her sister, who was now on her way to Australia.

Jervis was aware that he himself had not bothered about being fair. By marrying Nan he spoiled Rosamund's dirty game, and that was all he had cared for at the time. In the last 24 hours he had experienced a disposition to turn his back on the events which had led up to his marriage. They made a background incompatible with Nan as he was beginning to know her.

F. F.'s story made it impossible to blot things out. He felt instead an overwhelming desire to know what had been at the back of Nan's mind when she proposed that business arrangement. He had set her down as a shrewd opportunist catching at a marriage above her hopes. But, then, why not play her best card—why not show her scar and claim his gratitude?

The shrewd opportunist would surely have done this. And Nan, according to F. F., had hidden her trump card instead of playing it. She had hidden her parentage too. No opportunist worth the name would have neglected to claim Nigel Forsyth as a father. What had been in her mind?

Something glimmered among his thoughts like a will o' the wisp. It was a dancing point of light that turned a flickering gleam here and there and was gone. He would have married anyone, and picked her up anywhere. He had certainly been mad, and it was Nan who had stood between him and the abyss. The gleam touched that.

None of these things presented themselves to him in words. It could hardly be said that he recognized what the gleam showed him. His conscious thought had not greatly altered as yet. There was behind it a pressure which would compel it to alter.

Jervis turned and began to walk back the way he had come. One thing at least he could now explain to his own satisfaction, and that was Nan's extraordinary obsession with regard to Robert Leonard. He didn't of course, believe the story of Leonard coming down the cliff and passing the pool. That was nonsense—part of the obsession.

No—what had happened was quite obviously this—Nan had seen Leonard somewhere on the beach either that day or some other day. She had had a shock, and was feverish, and she had got Leonard mixed up with her fever. She had had a bad dream about Leonard and had tacked it on to the things that had really happened.

Jervis felt much better when he had settled this. It let Nan out, and it let Leonard out. It explained everything perfectly.

He got back to Weare to find the house dark except for a light in the hall. Monk had standing orders never to sit up. He put out the hall light and went up in the dark. As he passed Nan's door, he heard the thump of Bran's tail and a faint snuffling sound. He said, "Lie down, Bran!"

As he opened his own door, the sounds ceased. He put on his light and undressed. Before he got into bed he drew the curtains back, and fell asleep while he was wondering why moonlight made everything look so still.

He waked with a start, he did not know how much later. Then he heard a sound—Bran moving in Nan's room. Restless brute! But that wouldn't have waked him. He raised himself on his hand, and as he did so, he heard a choking cry and in a moment was out of bed and at the door between the two rooms. If it was bolted. . . .

But it gave to his hand. He switched on the light, and saw Nan sitting up in bed under the crimson canopy, her eyes wide and blank with terror, and her lips parted in a gasping cry. Bran, with his forepaws on the bed, whined and licked frantically at her hair, her shoulder, her arm.

As the light went on, he growled, flung round, dropped to the floor, and bounded to meet Jervis, thrusting at him with his head and making anxious sounds in his throat.

Jervis bade him lie down, harshly. His first thought was that the dog had frightened Nan. Then, as he reached the bed, he saw that her gaze was fixed neither on him nor on Bran. It had no focus; it saw nothing. It was just a wide gaze of fear.

She was sitting stiffly upright with her hands pressed down upon the bed. Her short brown hair was wildly rumpled. Her face was of an agonizing pallor, her eyes all staring pupil. She had on a childish white night-gown, rather high at the neck, and beneath it her breast rose and fell with each sobbing breath.

Jervis sat down on the edge of the bed and put a hand on her shoulder.

"Nan—what is it? Please don't be so frightened—you're all right. It was just a dream." She trembled, and he put his arm about her. "All right in a minute. Just hold on, and it'll go. Would you like a drink of water? . . . No, I won't go till you want me to."

She was small and light to hold. Another of those dreadful shudders passed over her. He felt her struggle with it, stiffening herself against his arms until she was rigid. A sudden awkward tenderness for her fear came up in him. Under his impatient temperament he had a soft heart for children, animals—anything weak, defenceless, frightened. He patted her shoulder and tightened his grasp. "Look here, there isn't anything to be afraid of. It was only a dream."

She turned then, straining back against his arm so that she could look at him.

"Did you—dream it—too?" "No. Look here, it's nothing—a dream's nothing—it can't hurt anyone—you've only got to wake up. Here's Bran telling you the same thing. He's most awfully upset about you."

Bran had his forepaws on the bed again. The tip of his tail moved deprecatingly. He pushed his head forward and blew warm puffs of air at her hand, her arm.

"Feeling better?" said Jervis. "What was it? Would you like to tell me?"

Leaning against his arm, and looking up at him with those unnaturally wide eyes, she said:

"I thought—you were dead." Her voice was the lost ghost of itself. He hardly heard the words; yet they reached him, releasing some emotion which he did not understand. He did not try to understand it, but it reinforced that odd tenderness.

"I thought—you were dead," said Nan.

"Do I feel as if I were dead?" His arm tightened about her.

"I saw you—in a dark place. You were—dead."

"Would you mind, Nan?" he asked softly.

My Beauty Hint

By Peggy Montgomery

The very young girl need not use rouge to give her cheeks color. Drinking lots of water, I find, not only brightens mine, but helps keep my skin clear and my eyes bright.

Every morning the first thing on arising, I take a glass of warm water with the juice of half a lemon. This is an excellent beginning for any girl's day.

No water with meals, but seven or eight glasses during the day and evening, is my drinking rule.

A body kept in tune by exercise and proper food will be reflected in the face. I enjoy my own informal method of exercises—and enjoying it makes it easier.

Whenever I am alone and have the opportunity, I turn on some music and dance a while. Then I immediately take a shower and lie down for complete relaxation.

I also do a few bending and twisting exercises when it is convenient. It is easy to work a few simple exercises into the daily routine, I find.

Dollar Watch Magnate, Reputed To Be Worth Five Millions, Leaves Small Sum.

New York, Sept. 28 (AP)—The fortune that Robert H. Ingersoll made with the "dollar watch," reputed at one time to have exceeded five million dollars, had dwindled to an estate of $257,295 at the time of his death in 1928, an accounting filed in surrogate's court showed Tuesday.

Unfortunate investments, it was indicated, had reduced the estate until all that was left was real estate in Michigan, Florida and Idaho and the household effects of his Park avenue apartment. It was in this apartment that his 36-year-old wife killed herself, in 1926, after shooting her admirer, Wallace Probasco.

COOLIDGE HEAD OF NEW RAIL SURVEY BOARD

Non-partisan Committee Will Study Finances, Suggest Remedies.

New York, Sept. 28 (AP)—Formation of a nonpartisan committee headed by former President Calvin Coolidge to survey the financial situation of the railroads and recommend remedies was announced Tuesday night on behalf of thirty one organizations sponsoring the survey.

Associated with Mr. Coolidge on the commission will be Bernard M. Baruch, a director of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad and well-known banker as vice-chairman; former Governor Alfred E. Smith; Clark Howell, Atlanta newspaper publisher, and Alexander Legge, of Chicago, head of the International Harvester company and former chairman of the federal farm board.

Would Mobilize Sentiment In addition to conducting the survey of the railroads' problems and drafting a solution, the committee is charged with mobilizing public sentiment on behalf of a remedial legislative program and laying the program before congress.

In announcing the formation of the committee and the acceptance of its members Tuesday night, Walter Bennett, president of the emigrant industrial savings bank, made no forecast as to what lines the survey and its resulting proposals might take.

Depression But One Factor However, a letter by which the committee members were formally invited to serve read, in part:

"The present deplorable condition of the railroads is not due wholly to the stagnation of traffic resulting from the long continued depression. Many of the present ills are due to governmental, financial, labor and management policies. Some wrong in conception, some wrong in application, and others rendered obsolete by radically changed conditions.

"No solution will be effective unless the problem of the railroads is considered as an integral part of the entire transportation problem of the United States, whether by rail, highway, waterway, pipeline or air.

"Every industry in the country is entitled to fair treatment—the railroads no less than the others. The public interest must certainly be protected, but regulation should not place the railroads at a hopeless disadvantage with competing agencies and destroy flexibility of operation and management initiative."

Says Law Does Not Favor Poor Violator

California Asks Supreme Court To Rule On Validity Of Sentence In Lieu Of Fine.

Washington, Sept. 28 (AP)—A man who lacked $2 to pay a fine for violating a traffic ordinance at Los Angeles, California, and was sentenced to a day in jail, Tuesday asked the supreme court to decide whether the practice of imposing a jail sentence in such a case is discrimination against the poor and a violation of the federal constitution. Bruce B. Johnson was given a ticket for overtime parking of an automobile and was fined $2 or a day in jail. Johnson told the judge he did not have the $2 and was therefore ordered committed to jail.

ALEXANDER'S LEAD OVER FOX FOR CROWN, 0032

Chicago, Sept. 28 (AP)—Irvin Howe, veteran dealer in baseball statistics, checked and double checked his record books but the cold figures named Dale Alexander, of Boston, as batting champion of the American league by 32 thousandths per cent over Jimmy Foxx, of Philadelphia.

The final statistics, largely official, gave the standings of the two close rivals as follows: Alexander, .3673; Foxx, .3641.

Out of the Past
Happenings of Days Gone by as Chronicled in The Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times, the Files Reveal

Another Business Change: Last week a deal was consummated between Elias Dillfield and John Kimple, both of this place, by which the latter becomes the proprietor of the wholesale liquor establishment on Baltimore street. Mr. Kimple will take charge as soon as the license is transferred.

Local Miscellany: The family of U. Ambrogia, the Baltimore street fruit dealer, arrived here recently from Italy. They reside on East Middle street.

Mrs. Anna Wilson, Chambersburg street, sold her fine sorrel horse last week to a Baltimore party for $250.

Has Taken Charge: F. C. Hoppel took charge of the Carlisle street meat market Monday morning. Mr. Hoppel is a hustler and thoroughly understands the business. He will make some notable improvements at his place of business.

New Minister for Episcopal Church: The Rev. Noonan Hammond Burnham, a graduate of Yale College and of the General Theological Seminary, has been appointed rector of the Episcopal church of the Prince of Peace, this place, and will hold his first service on Sunday, October 6th. Mr. Burnham comes here from Churchtown, highly recommended by the Bishop.

Death of Wm. H. Bayly: William Hamilton Bayly, chief clerk of the Pension Department, Washington, D. C., died suddenly at his home in that city on Sunday from heart trouble.

Mr. Bayly was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bayly, and was born in Cumberland township in 1850. He graduated from Gettysburg college in 1870. He then took up the study of law with the late Judge Wills and was admitted to the Adams County Bar.

In 1887 he was appointed Special Examiner in the Pension Department. He won promotions from time to time until 1897, when he was made chief clerk of the department.

Mr. Bayly was considered the best versed man in pension matters in Washington. He was exceptionally well liked by his associates and was popular with all classes of people in the Capitol City.

Mr. Bayly was president of the Sons of the American Revolution. He was one of the party who accompanied President Roosevelt to this place on May 30th, 1905, and it was through his efforts largely that the President made the address on that occasion.

He served one term as Burgess

Read The Bible With Us Daily

A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth: and a word spoken in due season, how good is it!

The way of life is above to the wise, that he may depart from hell beneath.

The Lord will destroy the house of the proud: but he will establish the border of the widow.

The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord: but the words of the pure are pleasant words.

He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house: but he that hateth gifts shall live.

The heart of the righteous studieth to answer: but the mouth of the wicked poureth out evil things.

The Lord is far from the wicked: but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

The light of the eyes rejoiceth the heart: and a good report maketh the bones fat.

The ear that heareth the reproof of life abideth among the wise.

He that refuseth instruction despiseth his own soul: but he that heareth reproof getteth understanding.

The fear of the Lord is the instruction of wisdom; and before honour is humility.

of the Borough of Gettysburg. He is survived by his wife and one son, Louis; also by three brothers—Russel and Van Wyck, of Baltimore, and Joseph Tate Bayly, of this place.

Good Show: Frank A. Robbins' circus train, made up of 18 large cars, arrived here from Waynesboro at 4:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, and proceeded to erect the water-soaked canvas.

The parade started at 11 o'clock. It was highly creditable, there being three bands in line, a steam piano, cages of animals, two elephants and a large camel. Several clowns also furnished amusement.

The afternoon and evening performances were excellent, and it is to be regretted that the weather was such as to prevent a larger attendance.

Personal: Mrs. F. J. Buehler and Miss Lou Kalbfleisch are visiting friends in York.

Mrs. T. J. Stanhope, of Philadelphia, is visiting Miss Edwards.

Mrs. Lulu Reese, of York, is visiting Miss Rose Guinn, Buford avenue.

Miss Laura E. Miller, formerly of Mummansburg, lately a teacher at Westport, Washington, has resigned her position and gone to Richard, Oregon, where she takes charge of the Primary Department in the public schools of that place.

John Lower, son of Calvin T. Lower, will enter Villa Nova Business college.

Miss Elsie Singmaster and Miss Forsythe left for Washington on Friday.

Two-year-old Girl Half Mother's Size

Daughter Of Midget, Former Trouper, Is Normal Child.

Minneapolis, Sept. 28 (AP)—When a stranger knocks at the home of Mrs. Thomas Leslie and she comes to the door, she is always prepared for a dialogue like this:

"Is your mother home?"

"I'm the mother here."

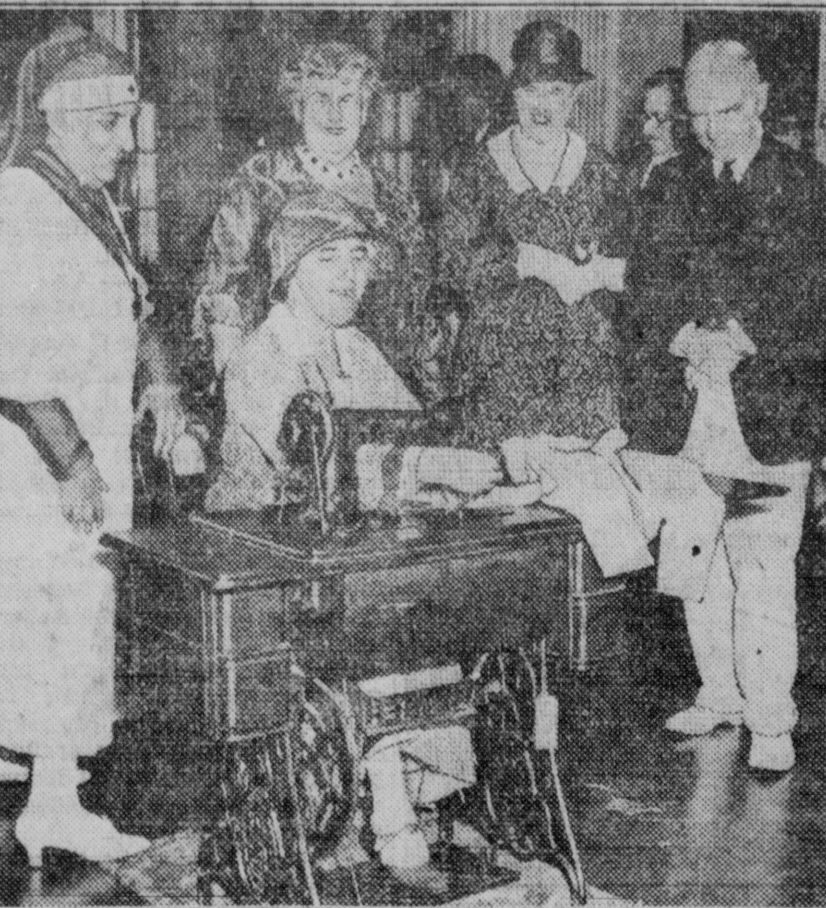

Mrs. Leslie is only a little over three feet six inches tall. Her daughter, who is 23 months old, weighs half as much as she does and is as tall as an average child of her age.

Mrs. Leslie, once a trouper with a midget act, presides over her home alone, makes most of her child's clothing and prepares meals for her husband, who is nearly six feet tall.

Years ago she did all the cooking for her father and seven brothers, all over six feet, so she is familiar with household activities.

The line, bulwark of Indiana university's football strength in recent seasons, will have nine returning veterans and four promising sophomores this fall.

MRS. HOOVER SHOWS SHE CAN SEW

Mrs. Herbert Hoover joined a corps of volunteer workers at the District of Columbia Red Cross headquarters to sew clothing for the needy from cloth made of farm board cotton. Standing behind Mrs. Hoover, left to right, are: Mrs. J. H. Fishback, Mrs. William Spencer, Mabel Boardman, general secretary of the national Red Cross, and John Barton Payne, chairman of the relief organization. (Associated Press Photo)

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

WHAT IS BEYOND?

I HAVE been impressed with the opinions of a number of notable people as to their ideas about immortality, or the state of life beyond this one.

From the greatest of them all, however, the opinion seemed much the same—there is nothing to prove life beyond this one, but evidences, supported by faith, that there must be something beyond, and that it is unreasonable to suppose that all is to be obliterated at death. Otherwise from where does the incentive to rise higher, to do right, to be of service in the world come from?

Something must urge, even drive, us on and on. And our state of happiness is regulated by our efforts to constantly become more useful members of society.

When I am thrilled with beauty, a sense of happiness seems to flow through me. I cannot explain it, any more than I can explain why it is that beauty affects me at all. We seem to be born with an urge to rise higher, and to grow. Our years are progressive periods, not merely measurements of time. There is a richness of thought behind our maturer years.

Trivial things drop away, as hardly worthy of notice, as we delve into ideas and work them out for the benefit of others. If this life ended all, we would be more prone, perhaps wholly so, to live selfishly, working out all problems so as to meet our own gain. But this is not so. Few can live for themselves alone, if indeed any can.

What is beyond? I like to think that something better is beyond, in the same way as I have always felt that all losses and disappointments are matched with something infinitely greater in value, just so long as we divorce our own desires and wed them to the larger good of the world.

When Charles Sumner was dying, he whispered to those nearest him: "Look after my Civil Rights Bill." To the last his thoughts were concerned with the generous stream of his entire life effort. He seemed not concerned as to what was beyond for him.

What is beyond? Life more abundant I believe—and mostly, I would hope, for those into whose consciousness we have sought to be felt.

THE LITTLE COUNTRY HOSPITAL

The little country hospital is hidden out of view

And people seldom notice it as pleasure they pursue, But let an accident befall—which is the fate of men—

The proudest man is glad to see the small-town doctor then.

And in that little hospital which humble folk maintain

He'll find that hearts are merciful and quick to comfort pain.

It isn't like the city place, with sections blocks apart,

Where every patient's listed as a number on a chart

And specialists for this and that convene to thumb his o'er

And ask a thousand questions of the ill he's had before.

For in the country hospital, which lacks all pomp and style,

The surgeon on his morning round has time to chat awhile.

And whether pain be in your groin, your stomach or your toe,

The cause of it the doctor there assuredly will know.

He will not shunt you round the place for rays of that and this,

He'll diagnose your case himself and very seldom miss.

And whose'er shall tread the hall when you are free from pain

Will stop to speak a cheery word and wish you well again.

So little country hospital, which humble folks support,

Which struggles for existence, since its funds are always short,

I pay this simple tribute now to all your tender care

In lessening the hurt and pain which mortals have to bear,

And pray for God's rich blessing on the men and women brave

Who give their every ounce of strength another's life to save.

FOURSOME DRUBS PAR

Baxter Springs, Kas. (AP)—A foursome which included the medalist and three of the leaders in the Mineral Belt golf tournament here scored 21 birdies and two eagles in the first round of play. Carl Childress, of Joplin, Missouri, was low with a 69, five under par.

OVER 200 DEAD, 1,000 INJURED IN PUERTO RICO

Property Loss In Wake Of Hurricane Runs High Into Millions.

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Sept. 28 (AP)—A hurricane swirled through Puerto Rico Tuesday and lumbered on, leaving a death toll that probably will mount into hundreds and property damage that will finally be calculated in the many millions of dollars.

Governor James R. Beverley Tuesday night estimated the dead at more than 200 and the injured at 1,000.

It was the "Storm of St. Eusepic," named for the feast day of that saint Monday, when the dread winds first started their relentless northward course out of the equatorial Atlantic.

Much Of Island Devastated Tuesday night all was over, and much of the island was devastated just as it was by the storm of San Felipe in 1928, when hundreds lost their lives and property damage mounting into many millions were wrought.

Governor Beverley lost no time in starting relief machinery and late Tuesday had formed an emergency committee and given it instructions to find shelter and food for the many thousands of destitute and homeless.

He promised insular funds would be placed in the committee's hands today, pending a definite relief program.

Ordered To Carry On "We must have everybody go to work," the governor said, "as though nothing had happened—only more so."

The mayors of the towns which were stricken called on the governor and were instructed to supply emergency relief for forty-eight hours.

Some of the mayors asked for cash with which to bury the dead, but the governor denied their requests, asserting that burial was a problem for the municipalities.

Living, Not Dead, His Problem "The insular government's duty is to help care for the living," the chief executive said.

The governor's couriers, sent out to gather information on the hurricane, brought back word on which he based his estimate of the dead and injured. He said this estimate undoubtedly would be revised upward.

Because of broken communication lines there was no way of telling how many dead there were.

Pictures Destruction Rafael Veve, Jr., assistant general manager of the Fajardo Sugar company, arrived at the capital late Tuesday after a fatiguing journey of eight hours from Fajardo, only thirty miles away.

"All the towns between Fajardo and Carolina, more than half the distance to the capital, were leveled," Veve said. "All the plantation houses were destroyed."

"There were thirty-nine dead at Fajardo when I left at 8 a. m., and I saw about one hundred dead between Fajardo and Carolina. I can well imagine thousands dead in the districts I traversed."

CUMBERLAND COUNTY

FIRE CAUSES $2,000 DAMAGES

Carlisle—The barn, crops and implements of Elmer A. Clouser, Mechanicsburg R. 1, about two miles southwest of town, were destroyed Monday by fire believed to have started by spontaneous combustion. The loss is estimated at about $2,000.

Clouser stated that he heard a dull explosion from the section where the alfalfa hay was stored and looking up saw flames sweep from the roof of the frame structure. The fire occurred about noon Monday.

LAY PLANS FOR CELEBRATION

Carlisle—Arrangements are being made by the Hamilton library and Cumberland county historical association for a Washington bi-centennial celebration to be sponsored by the two organization, according to Samuel M. Goodyear, Carlisle, secretary of the association.

YORK COUNTY

WILL DEDICATE MEMORIAL PLAZA

York—The magnificent Washington memorial plaza at the York fair grounds will be dedicated with impressive services next Sunday afternoon.

The program for the event, which will be of wide community interest and open to all men, women and children, was announced Monday night by Samuel S. Lewis, president of the York county agricultural society, following a meeting of the board of members of the society.

HANOVER THREATENED BY PROLONGED DROUGHT

Hanover—Light showers fell in Hanover early Monday night, but at yet have been insufficient to relieve the shortage in the public water reserve which has again stricken Hanover and which is rapidly approaching a crisis. The Parr's Hill reservoir was fuller than for many days, but that was due to transferring the water from the Clear Water lake at Silver Oaks to the Hill reservoir and does not indicate an increase in the stream flow. Persons have been asked by the company to refrain from washing cars or scrubbing.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS Intoxicated motor vehicle operators were involved in 111 accidents last month. Six were fatal, 64 non-fatal and 41 resulted in property damage only, the bureau of highway patrol and safety announces. Three intoxicated pedestrians were killed and 27 non-fatally injured.

The first day of enrollment at Indiana university this year brought forth 164 more freshmen than last year.

IN MEMORIAM

In remembrance of my dear mother, Mary Jane Reese, who departed this life three years ago, September 28th, 1929.

How sad to go home and not to see mother; Every spot seems dark and drear. We listen for the voice of one That we never more shall hear.

Some may think you are forgotten, Though on earth you are with me, But in memory you are with me, As you always were before.

Sadly missed by her daughter, Mrs. Marshall Sanders and Family.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—It has been nearly two decades since "The Birth of a Nation" was filmed but I suppose Henry B. Walthall always will be remembered as its "Little Colonel."

Despite the years there still is something of that tenderly romantic figure, who suffered with Lillian Gish through the vicissitudes of civil war, in this aging character actor who has survived many changes in screen styles.

He came to pictures from the stage in 1910 when stage actors used the films for pin-money and kept as far away from the camera as possible. The flicker shows were stealing the patronage of the theater's gallery fans, and stage producers frowned on actors in movies.

He Enters Pictures

"I had wondered down to the movie studios one day looking for an actor friend," he recalls, "and while waiting I ran across D. W. Griffith. He talked some to me of pictures and his enthusiasm was catching. When he asked me if I'd like to try working in a film, I told him 'I would.'"

Thus simply, without elaborate contracts, negotiations, mutual concessions, was a passport to fame issued in those days.

Times have changed much; Walthall has seen many things happen to the screen and its people; he doesn't believe the screen is in danger of perishing.

"Pictures have gone through these revolutions before," he smiles.

Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, Chicago Cubs' catcher, refused to change his shirt or any of his playing attire during the club's long winning streak.

TO POPULARIZE POLO Chicago (AP)—Polo, the sport of financial kings, will become the talk of the masses if plans of the Oak Brook club here go through. A new stadium accommodates 2,500, all in box seats, at $1 per seat.

HAD SO MUCH GAS IN STOMACH
COULD HARDLY GET HER BREATH

Hanover Lady Had Suffered
With Indigestion for Years.
Tells of Complete Relief
Brought by Natex.

The enthusiastic reports coming in about Natex are not surprising for this new medicine is three times as effective as ordinary herbal tonics. It contains a special, valuable ingredient which is a real tonic for your bowels and relieves even the most stubborn cases of constipation. It banishes indigestion in many cases where every other medicine has failed. It tones up the liver, aids the kidneys and builds up new strength and vigor. Every day the Natex man at Bender's Cut Rate Store, receives statements from local people it has helped.

Mrs. Geo. L. Kehr, 66 Ridge Ave., Hanover, says:
"I was in a terribly rundown condition when I started on your new prescription. For years I had been a constant sufferer from indigestion. No matter what I ate gas would form and bloat me out so badly that I could hardly get my breath. I became very nervous, could scarcely sleep and also suffered a lot with constipation. I felt tired out and miserable most all the time and my housework was a real burden."
"In just a short time Natex has made me feel like a different woman and today I can eat anything I want without suffering with the indigestion or gas. The constipation has also been overcome, my nerves have been steadied and I am sleeping like a tired out child."

the whole night through. I feel stronger and better in every way and take real pleasure in doing the cooking and housework and I seem to be able to get through so much quicker and without the fatigue that used to always be present."
Natex is being sold and recommended by all leading druggists everywhere and especially by Bender's Cut Rate Store (formerly Murphy's), 16 Baltimore St. Accept no substitute, there is no other medicine like Natex. Natex is the only triple-strength prescription perfected by a college professor from nature's roots and herbs.

Ruling Barring Foreign Students
From Regular Jobs Protested

Labor Department Motivated By Unemployment Conditions — Hoover Confident Bona Fide Seekers Of Learning Will Suffer No Hardship.

Washington, Sept. 28 (AP).—Declaring American students should have preference in opportunities to work their way through college, the labor department has barred from "regular employment" foreigners who have been given special admission to the country in order to attend school.
The students affected are those allowed to enter for study without regard to quota restrictions affecting immigration from their country.
W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of labor, said Tuesday the new interpretation was made after an investigation motivated by general unemployment conditions.
Several objections to the ruling have been received at the white house, and President Hoover himself has taken a hand indirectly. In reply to a letter of protest from Dr. John H. MacCracken, associate director of the American Council of Education, Lawrence Richey, one of the president's secretaries, sent the following letter:
"I am happy to be able to advise you that the president is confident that the regulations will be so administered as to cause no hardship to bona fide students with the intention and ability to maintain a student status."
Husband explained that although foreign non-quota students now in this country would not be prohibited from working for their landlord in payment for board and rooms, or from taking small jobs around their colleges in payment for tuition, they would be prohibited from finding "regular employment."
The ruling says that if any student that has been admitted without regard to quota limitations "engages in any business or occupation for profit, or labors for hire, he shall be deemed to have forfeited his status and shall be liable to arrest and deportation."
Mr. MacCracken Tuesday made public a letter to him from Norman Thomas, socialist nominee for president, saying of the ruling:
"I think this is an outrageous example of the worst form of nationalism. To put difficulties in the way of students is almost equivalent to giving up any effort toward mutual understanding among peoples and nations."

PHOTOS TAKEN OF OLD DEEDS

Photo copies of a dozen of the oldest and most interesting deeds and warrants in the department of internal affairs have been presented to Pennsylvania State college by Secretary of Internal Affairs Philip H. Dewey. The photo copies were part of an exhibit used by the department at the convention of Pennsylvania historical organizations and at the conclusion of the convention the copies were turned over to the college for a permanent exhibit.
The papers date back to 1682 when the duke of York deeded to William Penn the land which had been given Penn by King Charles in payment of a debt. The original papers are dated August 24, 1682. Included in the list of copies also is the deed for the tract of land which Penn purchased from the six Indian nations, it being Penn's practice to purchase lands from the Indians notwithstanding the fact that the land had already been given to him by the king. The tract covered in the deed of the six Indian nations was located in north and western Pennsylvania, the line extending diagonally from what is now Bradford county, southwest to include parts of Allegheny and Beaver counties. At the time, the deed shows, Penn paid the Indians $5000. The tract now makes up in whole or in part, 23 of Pennsylvania's counties. The tract, likewise, is the site on which is located the majority of Pennsylvania's oil and gas wells as well as most of the bituminous coal mines of the state.
An Indian deed dated July 15, 1682 the original of which is in the possession of the department of internal affairs, was copied and included in the list turned over to the college. Recently the department completed a map locating the Braddock military road which extended from Cumberland, Maryland, to Pittsburgh, a road which figured in the early military life of George Washington. The map is 18 feet long and a copy of this was forwarded to the college.
The department of internal affairs has records of the original transfers of lands from the commonwealth to the first private owners and copies made for the historical convention and presented to Pennsylvania state college were made from original papers now yellowed with age.

Washington—Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa must be thoroughly enjoying the situation in which he finds himself these days—Everybody is waiting to see whether he will decide to run for the senate as an independent in the November elections. He was defeated for the nomination on the regular republican nomination in the Iowa primary by Henry Field, the Shenandoah seed merchant.
Brookhart's regard for the republicans is about the same as his feeling for the democrats. He likes neither particularly well.
He broke long ago with President Hoover and the leaders of the administration over the question of farm relief, has attacked them mercilessly in and out of the senate. He has strayed about as far as anyone could from the republican reservation and still keep the party label.
And besides, he has a sort of personal grudge against the republicans which he finds hard to forget.
It dates back to 1925 when he came to Washington armed with a certificate of election certified by the executive council of the state of Iowa stating that he had been elected to a six-year term in the senate.
The senate refused to admit him, however, after a prolonged contest. Brookhart says to this day that the senate disregarded the election laws of his state—makes the charge openly in his official biography in the Congressional Directory.
They gave a democrat his seat.
